

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS PARADE

Beef Trust Denounced in May Day Demonstration.

Women Join with the Men in the March —A New Organ to be Started by the Party.

On transparencies and by the speakers the Beef Trust was attacked yesterday during the Mayday demonstration of the Social Democratic Party. The demonstration included a parade of 20,000 persons, men and women, and concluded with a meeting at Madison Square, which ended shortly before midnight.

The demonstration this year was made a means of firing the Social Democratic sentiment so that the Socialistic co-operative daily paper, which it is proposed to publish in this city, may not lack material support. By the concert which is to be given this afternoon in the Grand Central Palace the plan is to be still further advanced.

The parade of yesterday was marked by the participation of women, principally young women, who walked in it until the end. They sang as they walked. When Madison Square was reached both women and men sang the "Marseillaise."

The meeting was presided over by Morris Brown. The resolutions which were adopted included such sentences as these:

That we use our economic organization with all our energies to the end that our wages be increased, that the hours of labor be shortened, that child labor be made unnecessary, and universal child education possible, that our wives may be relieved from the crushing factory oppression, and that we will support a workingman's daily paper in New York with which we can and will help to fight our great political and industrial battles.

That we employ our political organization with which to capture the powers of Government, and that as fast as these powers are captured they shall be used to protect the interests of the working class. That as a working-class Government we will take control, not only of the monopolized industries, but of all industries of whatever kind, and that we shall hold and operate them as common property and for the public good.

The speakers included Ben Hanford, Job Harriman, Charles Dold, John Spargo, and others.

Morris Brown said that the advise which was given not to eat meat was superfluous to the workingmen, since the price formed the boycott. "Vote to down the trust," Brown shouted.

The police who were sent to Madison Square had a grievance. There were 200 of them from nearby police stations. They were sent to watch the crowd that would, it was supposed, assemble as early as 8 o'clock. It was 10 o'clock before the parade reached Madison Square.

"It's a shame," one of them said. "We have been on our feet since 8 o'clock this morning, and here we are yet."
